Since I have a busy practice with two offices, the flexibility of the schedule was of utmost importance to me. There was never a time that I was unable to register for the classes that I needed. Although it has been less than a year since I graduated, I feel that I am receiving greater interest and respect from Western practitioners. Many of my new patients have told me that my education level was a deciding factor in which acupuncturist they chose.

Pacific College's doctoral program far exceeded my expectations. It is affordable, convenient and flexible. It enabled me to balance work/life, family, and school, and still be considered full-time. The program has hugely impacted my network and referral sources. It has equipped me with the confidence and skills to partner with other healthcare professionals to deliver an optimal healthcare experience to my patients.
